

Patty Anglin [REDACTED]

tomorrow and beyond

1 message

Tue, Jul 14, 2009 at 6:07 AM

Dear Isaiah

It is with much regret that We write this letter to you. If only things could have turned out for the better. We had so many dreams and hopes together, but you must now go on and complete them yourself. We are truly sorry things have turned out like this, but we want you to know that as long as you live we will still continue to care about and pray for you every day. The Thompsons are good people down deep even if we do not always agree, I want you to know that we have forgiven them for this interference. However it will most likely be their wish to have no further communication, with us, and we agree that as long as there is bitterness and resentment between us this is for the best. We do not know what you will be told there, but remember the beautiful times we had together, remember we loved you always, and even to this day we love you. We have forgiven you with all our hearts, and hold no condemnation over you. No one can ever take away the truth of what really happened here. This is the hardest thing we have ever had to do. The other children walked away from us, but it has broken our hearts to have to push you away. One day we hope that we can sit down at a table and reconcile our differences as adults, God can even restore this if we all truly look to him. When you are eighteen and a legal adult we will communicate again, but remember that our desire is restoration and hope, not anger. Finally We leave you with one warning, your sister is an angry person, do not let her attitude poison your spirit. She is the main reason we cannot have any contact until you are an adult. We have tried to restore relationship with her many times and she continues to work against that. Pursue God with all your heart, do not wait for someone else to encourage you, but seek him on your own. Understand his ways, find his wisdom, and as you do we will meet again and build a relationship far more beautiful and strong than we have ever had. May God richly bless and prosper you as you go, may he give to you wisdom and understanding, we pray that he will show to you the love we have but cannot show, and may he raise you up to be the mighty leader we believe he wants you to be.

Goodbye Son

Love Mom and Dad

7/14/2009